Update on Surf Club Development.

Dear Members,

I finally have some great news to share with you all.

Below is a "Media Release" by Sutherland Shire Council, which would now be in the news spotlight.

This is an important step forward – with demolition on site to start soon. As you would be aware Council have already made changes to the carpark to facilitate the moving in of the Demolition Contractor.

I know we will experience some pain over the coming months, but I also know that we are a resilient group who will make the best of the situation.

In the below "Media Statement" you will also see a artist impression of the new proposed Clubhouse.

Whilst there is still a lot of work to go before anything final is distributed, I can assure you all, that we are working well with the Sutherland Shire Council project team and Jasmax the Lead Designer – our views and comments are being supported throughout this period of design.

It is exciting times ahead – the light is definitely now switched on.

As I am able, I will provide further detail.

See you on the beach

MEDIA RELEASE

Demolition contractor appointed as North Cronulla Surf Life Saving Club redevelopment moves forward

Sutherland Shire Council has appointed Ford Civil as the principal contractor to undertake demolition works for the North Cronulla Surf Life Saving Club redevelopment, marking another significant step toward delivering a modern, fit-for-purpose facility for surf lifesaving volunteers, club members and the wider community.

Ford Civil is a family-owned civil construction company with extensive experience delivering demolition and civil infrastructure projects across New South Wales. The company has successfully delivered demolition works for major community projects, including the former Kogarah War Memorial Pool at Carss Park and the Botany Aquatic Centre, paving the way for the redevelopment of both facilities.

Council has also released a 3D artist impression for the future North Cronulla Surf Life Saving building. Prepared by lead design consultant, Jasmax, the renders provide the community with a first look at the proposed initial design concepts for the future facility.

Sutherland Shire Council CEO Clare Phelan said the appointment represented another important milestone for the project.

"The appointment of Ford Civil is a significant step in progressing the North Cronulla Surf Life Saving Club redevelopment from planning into delivery," Ms Phelan said.

"Demolition works will pave the way for a new facility that better supports the Club's lifesaving operations, and community activities well into the future."

"The artist impression gives our community a clear picture of the high-quality facility that will ultimately take its place."

North Cronulla Surf Life Saving Club President Geoff Budd said he was pleased to see the project continuing to move forward.

"This is a significant moment for our Club and everyone who has worked hard over many years to get the project to this point," Mr Budd said.

"The commencement of demolition will be a visible sign that progress is being made towards delivering a new home for our members and volunteers."

"While there is still work ahead, I know our Members' will be excited to see the concept drawing of the future Clubhouse and surrounds and with work starting on site, I am sure they are as excited as I am to see the project move into this next phase and to share the vision for the finished future Club facility"

Jasmax Project Director, Minnie Cade said, "The North Cronulla Surf Lifesaving Club has played a critical role in keeping the beach safe for over 100 years. The design of their new home reflects a deep respect for the site's cultural heritage, historical importance and enduring connection to the community. Designed to sit responsively within its coastal park setting, the facility will contain both lifesaving services and community facilities and support current and future generations of lifesavers."

Demolition works are expected to commence in the coming weeks and will be completed by April 2027, weather permitting.
